

SILVER SENTIMENTS.

The change of sentiment on the silver question within a year in the North Atlantic states has been remarkable. Before that the leading journals and most of the magazines were governed by a policy of repression; or, if they touched the subject at all, gave only the Wall street side. The interest has assumed a public prominence that no longer admits of the kind of treatment. The silver side now has access to leading periodicals and the great journals are opening their columns to its consideration.

The last issue of the New York Weekly Tribune has a grand silver speech by Senator Stewart of Nevada while the New York Herald, the World and other metropolitan papers have apparently assented to a fair discussion of the subject.

Now comes the announcement of a prospective financial journal—name not given—to be published by H. B. Philbrook & Co., New York, the purpose of which is to put in the field "a proper advocate of the policy of making both gold and silver a permanent foundation for a currency and credit for the country, and by having both possessed by the government as such foundation or basis of money in the form of paper; to advocate the use of all the productions of the mines for such purpose, and establish the fact that the whole of the productions of gold and silver of the country are needed as such basis of money, and to be given perfect representation by proper paper currency of the same system as the present silver certificates."

An able financial journal published within the shadow of Wall street and devoted to constitutional bimetalism would be a potent adjunct in the fight for financial reform. This nation is entitled by its power, wealth and credit to occupy a foremost position in the financial world and if its monetary policy were shaped in the interest of producers, instead of usurers, the United States would now hold no subordinate position in relation to international exchange and discount.

While the cause of silver is steadily gaining ground in the East, we should see that there is no apathy on the subject in the West. Vital as the question is to the mining states, they have even less at stake than the farming interest, but it is nevertheless true that the people of the silver mining section must be relied on mainly to furnish the money for campaign purposes. There is a wonderful demand for silver literature from nearly all sections of the country and it will pay well to meet this thirst for information. A bureau for the preparation and distribution of pertinent facts and figures, demonstrating the enormous burden which money lenders have placed upon production, through the demonetization of silver, is the pressing need of the hour. It points to certain victory.

The Crucifixion at Chicago.

No event in the history of the world is so far reaching in its results and influence as the Crucifixion of the Savior, and no spot on earth is so rich in historic interest and tender association as Jerusalem and her environments. Probably more people have a desire to visit the Holy Land, and Jerusalem in particular, than any other place in the world. What matchless subject for a grand Pan-aramic production wherein shall be shown, not alone the scene of Crucifixion, with the surging multitude of scoffers, the small and almost panic stricken party of friends of the Savior, but also the ancient city gorgeous for the festival season, the great temple, palaces, walls, the whole city fairly alive with people from the country round about. This great scene, 50 by 400 feet high, is now being produced, and will be ready for public view by May 1st, on Wabash ave. and Hubbard Court, Chicago, where it will remain as one of the leading down-town attractions during the World's Fair.

The work is in the hands of Messrs. Reed and Gross, who produced the World's Famous Cyclorama of the Chicago Fire, now on exhibition in that city.

Jack McAuliffe has gone on the stage. The audience appeared greatly distressed at the end of the first act.

Fitzsimmons is still explaining to the public how he knocked out Hall.
